

Jason Brake--Biography

Information Technology Security Officer

Angelo State University

Jason first worked for the Angelo State University Information Technology department as a student employee helping to secure internet-facing systems. After graduating in 1998, he went on to support servers, computer labs, applications, and campus networks while maintaining security in those areas. In 2004, Jason transitioned to the ISO role to focus on information security for the university. Jason is an avid student of the topic of security with a focus on breaking down processes and discovering weaknesses in systems.
